

The Melody of the Star Tree

Hikayala Team

In a quiet mountainous Japanese village lived a smart and curious ten-year-old boy named Hiroshi.

Hiroshi wore a traditional colorful kimono, carrying a small cloth bag on his shoulder.

Hiroshi deeply loved learning,
trying to discover the secrets
of nature and music.

However, he faced a great difficulty in learning to play the traditional flute.

On a beautiful sunny day, Hiroshi heard sweet melodies from the ancient bamboo forest.

Hiroshi started running with great enthusiasm toward the source of the sound.

He tripped over a land
tortoise, sliding on the wet
grass as petals scattered.

Hiroshi stood up brushing the grass from his face with a wide smile.

When he reached the Star Tree, he found a wise teacher playing a melody.

Hiroshi approached with deep respect and asked him to teach him.

The wise man said, "Patience
is the bridge to mastery."

Hiroshi began learning with unmatched enthusiasm, making mistakes and trying again.

He finally managed to play the complete melody that made the tree's buds open!

Hiroshi returned to his village,
welcomed by his family and friends with admiration.

All the children learned that the love of learning illuminates
minds and creates miracles.
