

CHU AND THE Three Axes

by Hikayala Team

In the heart of the vast, snow-covered pine forests of Canada...

Chu lived, a brave and cheerful boy belonging to an ancient indigenous tribe.

Chu wore a thick animal fur coat and a gentle eagle feather on his head.

On a bright, cold winter morning,
Chu set out with his father.

Chu carried a shiny, new iron axe, a special gift from his grandfather.

While Chu was striking the trunk, suddenly... the axe slipped from his hand!

It flew through the air and disappeared inside a deep, dark hollow.

"Goodness me, the tree has swallowed my axe like a hungry
monster!"

Chu ran like lightning and began climbing the frozen tree trunk.

The snow flew around him as he climbed with skill and agility.

After numerous attempts, the axe was finally pulled out from the hollow.

The wise old village elder appeared carrying three axes.

"My brave boy, which of these three axes is your true axe?"

Chu's eyes gleamed with temptation for a single second.

But he remembered the value
of honesty and shook his head.

"No, uncle, my axe is this simple iron axe!"

The elder said, "I will reward
you by giving you all three axes!"

Chu leaped into the air with joy and excitement.

Chu became a role model for all the children of the forest.

Honesty is the true lamp
lighting the dark paths of life.

A vibrant illustration of a winter forest. Tall evergreen trees are heavily laden with snow, their green needles peeking through. The ground is a smooth, undulating expanse of white snow. In the background, a bright sun or moon glows through the misty air, casting a warm, golden light across the scene. The overall atmosphere is peaceful and serene.
